A PATHETIC SCENE.

The Power in a Five-Year-Old Child's Sermon.

From the Cartersville (Ga.) American.

Quite a party of gentlemen were sitting around the stove in Bibb & Strickland's when a little boy about five years old entered. He was a quick-looking little fellow, and there was a peculiar expression on his face. "Can't you preach for us, Claude?" asked one of the party. It seemed that he was used to that, and without any hesitation he placed a chair for a pulpit, took two little books that he handed him and pulled off his hat for business. Before saying a word he announced the number of his hymn, gave it out in language that was lisping and hard to understand, and then sang it through all alone. He then knelt again by his chair and prayed—this time aloud—but in words that no one could understand.

He took a text from one of his books and for eight or ten minutes he preached with much earnestness and spirit. The little audience was profoundly quiet. He was a peculiarly solemn fellow. There was a strange light in the little fellow's eyes and a peculiar glow on his face as he preached. He was scarcely as high as the chair behind him, and yet he was composed and easy in his manner. It was watching him and wondering what mysterious power was moving him. His voice rang out in a way that stirred the crowd of loafers into a solemn and almost painful silence.

We could not catch the meaning of his baby words that were so broken and lisping, but we could see the flash of his black eyes and feel the power of his presence. When his sermon was done he sang a song, took up a collection and recited fifteen cents, rendered service for the evening, and went out as quietly as he came. I learned that the scene was no uncommon one, and that sometimes he moved his audience to tears.

Same Man.

From the Detroit Free Press.

Some time ago a confidential clerk in the employ of a firm in Indiana skipped the gutter with several thousand dollars in ready cash. While it was determined to hunt him down, the firm did not feel like wasting a great deal of money in so doing. A one-horse country detective was employed, and after a while he traced his man to Detroit. The detective didn't propose to share any of the glory with the Detroit officers, and he sid around for a week before he learned that his man was in Windsor. Then he went over there, and working on the quiet, and a nice young man at one of the hotels informed him that the defaulter had just gone to Toronto, but would be back in a few days. The detective, who had friends and the nice young man had his little drinks and cigars at the detective's expense. The two came over to Detroit and attended the theater and had good times; and it was the opinion of the officer that he never met such a nice young man. Finally, a nice young man as they landed from the boat on the other side, the detective inquired:

"You must be an agent of some sort?"

"Oh, no," was the reply, "I am simply traveling for pleasure."

"Where do you live when at home?"

"In Indiana."

"Why, I'm from Indiana."

"What do you do for a living?"

"Whereabout in Indiana?"

"Vincennes."

"Good gracious! but my home is only three miles from Vincennes."

"Yes, I know."

"What did you do in Vincennes?"

"Clerked for Lath & Shingles."

"What? Why, that is the very firm that was robbed?"

"Yes, I know," was the placid reply.

"And your name is—what?" queried the detective.

"William Green!"

"Good! But you are the chap who stole the money?"

"Yes, certainly! You are going to do about it?" calmly replied the nice young man as he lighted another cigarette.

His only marriage license granted to day was to Frances Coffey, 20 years of age, 2020 Park avenue, and Mary Huff, 27 years, 1116 Monroe street.

Features of Divorce and Damage Cases Entered To-Day—An Incorporation.

On the second ground the demurrer to the petition in the suit of Kittie A. Johnston against the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. The plaintiff claims to be a daughter of the late James Johnston, Jr., who, during his lifetime, effected an insurance with the Connecticut Mutual for $15,000.

"The plaintiff may maintain the action alone, and there will be no defect of parties plaintiff, provided that the petition shows that the other children no longer have any interest in the entire sum to the payment of which the insurance company was bound, or that having such interest they refuse to join in the action, and are therefore defendants. The absence of such averments, however, makes it demurable."
